

CAPTURING FIRE:

photo essay and discussion on the phenomenon of wildland fire

There is a mystique to fire that runs deep in our DNA; we are drawn to it, and we fear it because it is a phenomenon that exceeds our control. It is simply bigger than us. We've placed ourselves in it's habitat in the wildland urban interface and so we must become more fire-adapted. Photographs take abstract concepts that come from verbal descriptions and give them a visceral reality. We understand it more when we see it.

Kari Greer has been documenting wildland fires, and the men and women who battle them, for nearly twenty years.

WED. OCT. 19, 2016
6:30 – 8:00

The Lyceum
Center for Southwest Studies
Fort Lewis College

The photo essay will be followed by a screening of Unacceptable Risk: Firefighters on the Front Line of Climate Change and a panel discussion with wildfire and mitigation experts.

This FREE event is open to the public, thanks to the following sponsors:

